LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

REVIVAL PHENOMENA.

To the Editor of the Express

Sir,—The Selby correspondent of the Beaver of last week, in alluding to the revival meetings still going on there says, "Mr. Allen Pringle was trying to display his eloquence in the Express last week in regard to the prostrations in the meeting, etc., etc."

The Beaver correspondent is mistaken. Allen Pringle deals in facts and reason, and is quite content to leave the mesmeric eloquence and rhetoric with the revivalists, without which I fear their occupation would soon be gone. Without seeking to make a display of any kind A. P. merely wishes to give wholesome advice to those who evidently need it, and that is to be temperate in all things, even in religion. But Mr. Selby suggests that he had better "let that job out to more competent hands." Perhaps so, but A. P. usually knows what he is talking about, and this can hardly be safely said of certain anonymous newspaper correspondents and some other people. The proper thing for Selby to do in these premises is to expose the incompetency. I do not feel disposed to blame Mr. Selby and others for the delusions they labor under. I sympathize with them, and only aim at a higher degree of enlightenment in this age which is said to be so enlightened. The well-meaning people, who, a few decades ago, so firmly believed in witchcraft that they tortured, hung and burned tens of thousands of so-called witches and wizards, were not to be blamed. They knew no better. They no doubt acted conscientiously according to the best light they had. The same authority quoted by Selby against (not me, but) science, about the "wind bloweth where it listeth," etc., was then quoted to prove witchcraft, and to justify the putting to death of multitudes of innocent people for a crime which had no existence, only in their own superstitious imaginations. The bible told them "Thou shalt not suffer a witch to live," and that was their authority. Even the learned judges on the bench were deceived, and condemned thousands of people to death for witchcraft. Where will you find a judge, or lawyer, or doctor, or man of science to-day who takes any stock in such nonsense? He would be a curiosity among enlightened people. And where, a century hence, would be found a denizen of civilization who would subscribe to the Selby version of the psychological phenomena occurring there? The North American Indian still believes in witchcraft, and the Selby scribe of the Beaver still believes that hysterics is religion.

Some thirty to forty years ago, when the can finally leave him so that he can induce the trance or prostration himself without the aid of the operator. This can be tested and proved, and fully answers the question propounded.

It now becomes my turn to ask a question:—If these prostrations are caused by "the power of God," by a "spiritual" instead of human influence, how is it that certain mundane machinery must be set in motion before the manifestations appear? How is it that one good man cannot produce them as well as another? How is it that one with a certain temperament and mental and physical make up is required? The minister who cannot mesmerize his flock may be a better man in every way than the one who can. How is this? On the mesmeric theory the answer is plain, on the opposite theory there is no reasonable answer. Yours, etc., ALLEN PRINGLE.

THE NORTHWEST.

To the Editor of the Express.

DEAR SIR,—I arrived in this city on Saturday at 3 p. m. Four hours later at Port Arthur we struck a snow storm and found all the lakes frozen over and one would think it was the month of February instead of May. The weather here is about what we had in Napanee about the first of April. The farmers have not commenced seeding as yet, although the report East said they were about through. I met a friend of mine from Brandon and he said some would commence to-day and a farmer from Ernestown said he commenced Saturday but the land was too wet. This city is full of people from all parts of the globe and all seem quite disappointed in not finding gold dollars in the streets, and as far as I could see not much prospect of anyone getting work and it costs as much again to live here as in the east. As far as I can judge anyone that has a home East had better stay where they are for the present anyway. I have looked this city over and made enquiries and I find every branch of business overdone far more than in the East. After I have been here a week or two I will write you again and be able to give you a better idea of the place. Trusting this will find all well in Napanee, I remain, Yours etc.,

GEO. W. SHIDLEY.

Winnipeg, Man., May 9th 1892.

PATRONS OF INDUSTRY.

To the Editor.

Dear Sir,—The farmer's Institute, during the last few years, has done much towards the uplifting of the farming community. It has been beneficial in assisting the farmers to put into practical use the best methods of farming as advocated by scientific and experienced men, but of all was the boy's employer at all, and my mother whom we all regarded as his guardian and employer, always treated him as she did her own boys, the only fault being that he was too well used and did not know how to appreciate it. Last, I willingly admit that the boy was not treated by his employer as he should have been, for he should have been sent back to the home two years ago, and then his employer would have been well rid of him.

I hardly know how to deal with the lines that follow, whose falseness baffle all comparison. I can see the meanness and malice of either writer or informer stamped on every line. I must admit that my brother acted unwisely in whipping the boy, not that the act was in itself wrong, for no doubt he richly deserved it, but that in so doing he exposed himself to the hold of the law, which is a hard master, and to public gossip and newspaper scandal, which are, to say the least, much more disagreeable and unjust. My brother did whip the boy, but not in the brutal and inhuman manner described so graphically in your columns. I think your informer must have drawn on personal experience with boys in a similar situation.

Further on the writer boldly states that the sole cause of the whipping was that the boy failed to buckle the bells on the horse in the proper hole. How, let me ask, did he know that? My brother knew what was the matter, and your correspondent don't freely talk of what he or she knows nothing at all about.

The boy is then spoken of as having taken his departure for a more friendly roof. I read that as irony, though your correspondent no doubt meant it otherwise. It has not hitherto proved so for persons similarly situated there.

The next remark is simply scandalous, and I would suggest, Mr. Editor, that your correspondents in future be more careful as to the character of their items. I will quote the lines I here refer to. "It has been noticed that the boy has never been properly clothed." The author of that statement is a dastardly coward and a liar and would not dare to face any member of our family with the statement. I consider it an insult to my mother, and I resent it as such, for she it was who had the boy's clothing to look after. As she has since told me what the boy had when he left I shall simply quote her own words. "I have a clear conscience. I certainly did my part for him, and did not use him any worse than if he had been my own son. He had a good pair of long boots (not No. 10, Mr. Editor) and a pair for Sunday wear. He wore the large ones for he said he had a sore toe. Then he had over a dozen shirts, as many pair of socks, plenty of mittens, a good overcoat and winter cap, and one good suit of clothes, a second suit and working clothes." So you see, Mr. Editor, the boy did not have to wear Donald's (No. 10) as your informer meanly and falsely insinuates, but wore large boots from choice, nor were they Donald's at all, probably an old pair of my own.

What I write I am positive as to the truth of. I consider the passages I have referred to as malicious, lying scandal, and the one who took the trouble to stir up the whole matter the said Alex. Fee referred to in the article, did so, not from any philanthropic motive or love of justice, but from pure malice, with perhaps an additional motive, that he wanted a boy himself.

E. M. FEE.

NEWS FROM THE COUNTRY

Gull Creek.

Planting is being commenced. Some people have commenced with their potatoes.

The water is very low but Rathbun's height-ho is coming pushing along as rapidly as it can.

It is said there is nothing new under the sun. There is something new along here at present. There are two stages running alternately through here from Arden to Tamworth. This makes travelling cheaper.

We are very much annoyed an account of the Express taking a tour around to Arden Fredericksburgh.

Union factory is making a good showing so far, having received over 14,000 lbs. of milk on Monday, and is making fifteen cheese daily.

S. Mills was in Belleville last week, in connection with his G. T. R. insurance claim.

Miss J. Forrester, Centreville, was visiting at James Fraser's a few days ago. Geo. I. Perry spent Sunday at Kingston. On Wednesday a tramp entered the house of James Hunter, section foreman, while Mrs. Hunter was busy in another part of the house and was helping himself in the pantry when discovered. He beat a hasty retreat eastward, when the governor was summoned, who, with a few solid kicks, sent him off on the double quick.

Rev. Mr. Crookshanks, Wilton, preached at the Lutheran appointment Sunday afternoon.

Croydon.

Mrs. J. Hunter is improving rapidly. Mr. Jas. Hughes, of Orchard Hill, has sold his beautiful span of bay horses. He realized a good price.

Mr. John Kellar is very enthusiastic over his mines now. He has "struck oil" for sure, he says.

Mr. J. Dowling was married at Erinaville this week to Miss Smith, of Tamworth. "We are the oldest married couple in Erinaville again as hale and hearty as a man of fifty instead of 75 years."

Fishing is all the go now. Some boys fish in the day time, pitch quoits in the evening and fish again at night.

Mr. Jas. Lynch is again at his old job in the cheese factory. Our factory makes seven or eight cheeses every day.

Visitors: Mr. Chisholm, of Roslin, at J. Hunters; J. Lockridge, Robert Harton, and Jas. Barrett, of Centreville; Mrs. and Miss Beckwith, of Marlbank; George and Cephas Dafeo, Roblin.

Wilton.

Mr. Forest Cowan met with a serious accident on Monday while on the way to Odessa on the stage. While going up Hartman's Hill some boxes, on which he was sitting, began to slide off. He jumped, spraining his ankle, and breaking his leg just above the ankle.

Peter Cummings, son of George Cummings died on Tuesday afternoon, of quick consumption produced by a heavy cold. The funeral, which was conducted by Rev. S. Crookshanks, on Thursday, was largely attended.

Rev. Mallet of Morven, who was expected here last Sunday morning, will preach next Sunday instead.

Owing to the increased attendance at the Presbyterian Sunday School, a meeting will be held on Friday evening at Mr. Wm. Owens to appoint some new teachers.

Benjamin Mills has purchased a couple of buildings from L. L. Gallagher. He has moved them on his lot, and will fit up one of them for a house.

Last evening a council of chosen friends, consisting of twenty-five members, was organized here. Five ladies joined.

Mrs. Pultz has returned from a lengthy sojourn in Coldwater, Mich.

The most general question is, Who is the new correspondent?

The majority of the farmers have their seedling done.

The gentle breezes and luxuriant rains have succeeded in starting quite a luxuriant vegetation on Stewart's upper lip. We hope it will not go back on him as Ira's did.

We are very sorry to record the death of Mr. James Robinson. He was an old and highly esteemed resident of Morven for over twenty years. The funeral service was conducted by Rev. R. Mallett, in the White Church on Sunday last.

We hear that Marshal passed through Morven last Saturday on his way to Lansdowne. We regret losing him from this vicinity, but we hope that there is sufficient attraction around Morven to call him back at least once a month. Eh Lizzie.

NAPANEE, FRIDAY, MAY 13, 1892.

THE government at Ottawa have blocked inquiry into the Judge Elliot proceedings. The subservient majority having staved off enquiry by a vote of 92 to 50. It has been assumed that the public conscience would be awakened by such proceedings but the vote in East York does not look that way.

The return of Mr MacLean, Tory, for East York was expected. Mr Mackenzie had but a majority of 25 votes over MacLean. Since then the voters' lists have been stuffed, and the government's printing bureau has been able to get in its work. It must also be remembered that two wards of the city of Toronto are in the riding, and everybody knows that Toronto is a hotbed of Toryism.

The following list of constituencies with the number of inhabitants therein shows just how the Tories work the Gerrymander, making the minority of voters to elect the majority of representatives. It will be seen that 82,622 persons living in seven Tory constituencies in Quebec are able to elect seven M. P.'s; while 236,115 persons who live in liberal counties are only able to return the same number. In Ontario 116,793 persons residing in eight Tory constituencies elect eight members to the Commons, but it takes 251,282 inhabitants of eight Liberal counties to elect a similar number of representatives. The city of Victoria in British Columbia is to have two members, with only 18,000 inhabitants, because it will return two Tories. But Quebec East with 36,000 persons, is to have only one representative, and so on. Yet the government claims that their Gerrymander is intended to equalize the constituencies.

The report that the Opposition at Ottawa will carry the Gerrymander Bill to Rideau Hall and ask the interference of the British representative, is not wholly a matter for ridicule. We have grown accustomed to having the Governor-General confine himself to formal, social and piscatorial duties; but his power is not so limited by the constitution; and it is time that we began to consider the utilitarian question of whether it would not be as well to make use of a public officer whom we pay. The question of redistribution is one that is particularly calculated to afford opportunity for, at least, trying the effect of utilizing the Governor-General. It is the people who suffer most keenly from a Gerrymander. They

CONGRATULATING SIR ADOLPHE.
It appears that a number of government supporters went to Sir Adolphe Caron's residence and aroused him out of bed to congratulate him upon the result of the discussion in the Ottawa Parliament. Evidently Sir Adolphe's friends realize that the enquiry is to be a farce. Otherwise they would reserve their congratulations or commiserations until after it was over.

SIR ADOLPHE'S COMMISSION.
It is rumored in political circles that Chancellor Boyd, of Toronto, Chief Justice Lancaster, of Montreal, and Judge Bosse, of Quebec, are to form the commission which will investigate the charges preferred by Mr Edgar against Sir Adolphe Caron. The two last named judges are fresh from the political field in which they were active supporters of the accused minister.

Why is not the census bulletin showing the strength and growth of the religious denominations laid before parliament? It has been ready for some time, and the country is entitled to the information it contains. What does Mr Carling hope to gain by holding it back? It has leaked out from official sources that none of the religious bodies have increased in numbers with the exception of the Catholic, and perhaps Mr Carling is reluctant to confess, that, under the operations of his trade policy, the Dominion has lost during the past ten years the whole of its natural increase among the protestant portion of our population, and all the Protestant emigrants as well. Let Mr Carling produce his bulletin, and then the public will know whether such is the case or not.

SIR CHARLES' DELEGATES.

Toronto May 6.—The Globe of yesterday contains the following despatch from London in reference to the reports of the tenant farmer delegates chosen by Sir Charles Tupper to visit and report upon the Maritime provinces last year:—"Much interest has been taken by farmers in the reports of the two farmer delegates, Mr McQueen, of Scotland, and Mr Davey, of England, selected by the Dominion Government to visit the Maritime provinces. It was announced a few days ago, however, that Mr McQueen's report had been suppressed by Sir Charles Tupper at the instance of the government at Ottawa. Mr Davey's, will be issued shortly with it, it is believed, some serious alterations. Mr McQueen's report has been suppressed because in it he pointed out that agriculture in the Maritime provinces is suffering from the

The fruit grown in the county has a most excellent reputation in England, and a largely increased trade may certainly be expected.

to serve the interests of the Government party and they have a deep concern in the matter quite distinct from that of the Opposition. Now the Governor-General would have no interest to serve but that of the people, and he would instantly demand a righting of this wrong. If indeed, he is to have no power at all, what is there to prevent a government from legislating themselves permanently into power by the most fanciful arrangement of the voters. The utter uselessness of an appeal to Parliament must have come home to the Liberals when the grave charges against Judge Elliot were jubilantly voted into oblivion. They cannot appeal to the people until the very bill they complain of becomes law and helps to render the people powerless to protest. The only appeal then that is left them is to the Governor-General; and he cannot ignore such an appeal without jeopardising the usefulness and, consequently, the stability of the office that he holds.—Star.

If the Reformers of Canada needed any justification or encouragement in resisting the outrageous legislation submitted to parliament by the present Dominion government, they would find it in the language addressed by Lord Salisbury, the British Tory premier, to the London Primrose League last week. "I am a Tory," said Lord Salisbury but I do not believe in this unequalled doctrine of passive obedience. I believe that the title of both kings and parliaments to obedience from their subjects depends upon those kings and parliament observing the fundamental laws and understandings whereby they rule. Parliament has the right to govern the people with laws but not the right to sell them into slavery. I do not believe in the unlimited and unrestricted power of parliament any more than in such power of kings. Parliaments like kings, may take a course which while technically within the legal limits of their attribution, is yet entirely at variance with the understanding of the constitution whereby they rule." Those remarks apply effectively to the course of the majority in our Dominion parliament. Nobody pretends that the Thompson Gerrymander bill, which proposes to cut and carve the constituencies in such a way that a minority of electors may be enabled to return a majority of parliamentary representatives, is not in the language of Lord Salisbury, "entirely at variance with the understanding of the constitution." And when Lord Salisbury denies the right of a parliamentary majority "to sell the people into slavery he condemns the Foster tariff, which makes the bulk of Canada's population virtual slaves of monopolists and combinesters.

Indigestion, Stomach and Liver Complaints.—Persons suffering from any derangements of the liver, stomach, or the organs of digestion should have recourse to Holloway's Pills, as there is no medicine known that acts on these particular complaints with such certain success. For bowel complaints it is invaluable, as it removes every primary derangement, thereby restoring the patient to the soundest health and strength. These preparations may be used at all times and in all climates by persons affected by biliousness, nausea, or disordered liver; for flatulency and heartburn they are specific. States market by the McKinley tariff. He spoke highly of the agricultural and mineral resources of these provinces, but stated that, after full inquiry, among the farmers themselves he had learned that the want of a market was a very serious drawback. He was told, and saw for himself that there is a large emigration of young people to the States. When the farmer's son's and daughters leave, the land in many cases is neglected, the buildings fall out of repair, and the value of the farm is depreciated. Mr McQueen pointed to the Dominion census returns as proof of the exodus, and the exodus he ascribed in great part, to the want of better trade relations with the United States, the natural market for the surplus produce of the provinces. He added that the economic question, though a political one in Canada, could not be ignored by persons intending to settle in the maritime provinces; in fact he could not recommend English or Scotch farmers to go there so long as the American market remains closed to Canadians.

BY THEIR OWN WITNESSES.

When Sir Charles Tupper selected Messrs. McQueen and Davey as delegates to visit the Maritime provinces as representatives of the tenant farmers of England, and Scotland, and to report upon those provinces as fields for emigration, he no doubt thought he had found men who would be easily stuffed by the Tory machine men in whose charge they were placed. The delegates were expected to report that agriculture and every other sort of business was booming in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, as a result of the federal government's trade restriction policy. But the shrewd, hard-headed English and Scotch farmers were not so dishonest or so easily humbugged. They came, they saw, and they made reports which the Dominion government and the high commissioner have either suppressed altogether or mutilated. The Tory leaders are afraid to let the people of Canada know what even Sir Charles Tupper's delegates have to say about the effects of trade restrictions upon the farmers of the maritime provinces. Those delegates found provinces rich in natural resources but cursed by a trade system which is driving the people out in thousands. They could not conscientiously advise their countrymen to seek homes in provinces from which the natives were fleeing in thousands, and they said so. And the foolish efforts of the trade restrictionists to suppress the reports of Messrs. Davey and McQueen have only served to attract greater attention to them. It is a rule of law that no litigant can discredit the testimony of a witness called by himself. Therefore the Tory leaders cannot discredit the testimony of their own official delegates with respect to the effects of their trade policy. Mr McQueen, whose report the ministers refuse to publish, because he condemns their vicious trade policy, states that the backward condition of agriculture in the eastern provinces is due to the exclusion of Canadian products from the markets of the United States. The soil is rich and productive, but the want of a remunerative market is causing the people to abandon their farms and go to the United States. Had the minister of agriculture published Mr Queen's report it might have been overlooked, but now everybody will want to read its "unpatriotic" contents.—Free Press.

He Fell Among Thieves

CHAPTER XV.

Seven years ago the reader caught a momentary sight of one M. Vergueil, standing in a brown study at the door of Miseri's Hotel in Constantinople. This gentleman was a figure in the police department of Paris and enjoyed a high reputation for both astuteness and good fortune. But like others amongst the astutest and the happiest, he found one thing denied him, and he was puzzled over the one case which baffled his intelligence that his failure in this respect left a drop of gall at the bottom of every cup of success he quaffed. The governments of three or four countries had unitedly agreed to leave in M. Vergueil's hands the investigation of a series of railway robberies. He had started on his work with something like certainty, and bit by bit his case had melted away between his fingers. It became a forlorn hope in the first six months, and M. Vergueil became a man with a grievance. He laid hands on scores of notorious criminals, he had brilliant successes by the dozen, but he had made nothing whatever of the great railway robberies, and his disappointment clouded him.

M. Vergueil's business had brought him to London. Forged notes of the Bank of France had been put in circulation at Monte Carlo and Spa pretty extensively, and had been dropped here and there in small quantities in the great cities of Europe. The imitation of the hundred-franc note was so admirable that only an expert could be relied upon to detect the difference between it and the actual issue of the bank. M. Vergueil's inquiries had led him to the belief that the seat of the forgery was in England, and both in lighting upon the original track and in following it up he had so far been blessed with even more than his usual good fortune.

He had taken up his headquarters at the Westminster Hotel, and sitting in his room immersed in thought over a cigarette and a glass of sugared water, he found himself awakened by the living accents of a voice which was at that moment speaking to his fancy's ear.

"Mr. Ronald Morton," said the voice. M. Vergueil set his whole soul in his ears and listened. He might hear nothing worth hearing, but on the other hand he was a gentleman who never missed a chance, and he was peculiarly anxious to know all that could be known of the owner of this particular voice. The room in which he sat and that in which the conversation was going on communicated by a door, which was for the present locked on one side and bolted on the other. M. Vergueil, noiselessly kicked off his slippers, and crossing the room with a cat-like nicety of tread, dropped on his knees with his ear to the key hole, and so stayed. The watchful grin upon his face was a study for intentness, but every now and then as the conversation went on the mere ghost of a smile flickered across it and at the mention of Mr. Gilfoil's name his eyes sparkled brightly for a single second. In his eagerness to hear he hardly dared to breathe, and to let his breath go silently he clenched his teeth with his lips drawn away from them in a curiously ghastly smile. When at last Heaton addressed his interlocutor as Mr. William Reid the detective gave such a start that his head came into contact with the door knob, and for a little while between his rage at his own clumsiness, his fear that he had betrayed a listener's presence, and the actual physical pain of the blow, he lost knowledge of what was going on. The next thing that came clearly to him was the gallant captain's noisy and defiant "Good morning." He heard the door open and close, and listened to the footsteps in the corridor, and hastily snatching up a pair of boots in order to have some ostensible reason for quitting his chamber, he dodged cat-like to the head of the stairs, and peered after Messrs. Hump and Heaton. He withdrew his head swiftly as the Captain looked about him, and glued himself to the wall of the corridor. There was a little silence between the pair, and the detective's strained ears caught the rustle of paper only. Then he heard Heaton's voice saying, "That's all, my boy. That was the number of the bond on top of the pile. They were lying on his table."

Mr. Vergueil admitted to his detractors that he was lucky. He had a little satiric habit among them of attributing all his success to the unbought blessings of fortune, but as he walked quietly back to his room he owned that no such stroke of luck as this had ever come to him. He had given William Reid up this half dozen years, had abandoned him with grief and wounded pride. He had longed for him as men only long for the unattainable; and being a person of a quick and vivid temperament had sometimes gritted his teeth in sudden rage at the manner in which he had been evaded. And now the delightful, unhop for, unattainable thing, the fabled bird of contentment whom men follow forever and who will not allow himself to be caught, came to him without even a call, and perched upon his hand. The eminent detective was happier than if he had heard with a subtle string stirring every nerve of his heart. He raised his hat with quite a grand air.

"Pardon my intrusion," he said, in English a little more set and deliberate than natives use, and only faintly noticeable for its accent. "Permit me to recall myself to the memory of Mr. Frost, with whom I have one moment's urgent business."

"No need to recall yourself," said Frost. "Excuse me for a single instant," he added to the ladies.

"A single instant," echoed M. Vergueil. "No more."

His face gave no sign, but he had not often in his life felt so happy. He had taken the prosecutor from under the nose of the criminal, and had left the trapped rascal there secure. It was a beautiful sensation, an apt reward for seven years' patience, a fitting solace for seven years' disappointment. Mr. Humphrey Frost's millions made his progress across the hall a little difficult. He was waylaid with fascinating smiles, and wheedled by a score of insinuating tongues. He parted with a good many sovereigns and five pound notes en route, for he had gone there ready to be plucked, and accepted the process with a smiling urbanity. At last he was through the crowd, and drawing Vergueil into the conservatory turned round and faced him.

"You have made a discovery?" he asked.

"I have made a discovery," Vergueil answered. He took the bond from his pocket and laid it in Frost's hands.

"Is that one of my Austrians?" Frost asked after looking at it.

"That is one of your Austrians," answered Vergueil, like a polite echo.

"How did it come into your hands?"

"I stole it," whispered Vergueil. "I stole it from the thief this afternoon. He has a mass of them in his possession."

"Have you arrested the man?" Frost asked.

"Not yet. At present that would be indiscreet." He looked cautiously about him, and having made sure that they were out of earshot he added in a low tone, "I am here on government business. I have reason to think that I have my hand over the forgers of French banknotes! The man in whose possession I found the bonds is one of the gang, and the same people who are issuing the counterfeit notes seem one and all to be implicated in the railway robbery in which your bonds were lost. In telling you this Mr. Frost, I need not say that I rely absolutely upon your silence. I do not speak of business of this kind to everybody, but I have already had such excellent proof of your discretion that I know beforehand that I risk nothing in telling you. I thought you had a right to know, and I give the information as soon as possible, in the assurance that you will keep it as secret as the grave."

Humphrey Frost was a very considerable personage, but Mr. Vergueil took a tone of quiet authority with him which he in no wise resented.

"You may rely upon my silence," he responded simply. "May I go back to the ladies? Would you like me to introduce you? You are aware that Mr. Vergueil is a distinguished figure. Everybody knows of him, everybody talks of him, but nobody has the good fortune to meet him."

"Good fortune!" said Vergueil, "that depends. It is not everybody who thinks it good fortune to encounter me. But I beg you to excuse me from the honor of an introduction. I am like the highway-man of old, I prefer to throw aside my incognito only in places suitable to my purpose."

that some dead millionaire had bequeathed him all his belongings. He sat in his own room smiling radiantly, and gripping one hand with the other, as if he were shaking hands with himself in a delighted self-congratulation.

He listened for the movements of the next room's occupant, and allowed his mind to play about him in charmed speculation. It was no wonder that he had not been able to track William Reid into the wildest fastnesses of Asia. It was not at all remarkable now that no attempt had been made to place the stolen bonds upon the market. William Reid had left them in safe keeping that Ronald Morton might, after long lapse of time, withdraw them. He could not keep out of his mind a grim respect for the man with whom he would have to deal. It was no common little scoundrel who had buried himself for seven years in the earth's darkest places to build up a barrier between himself and justice. M. Vergueil's blood flushed at the fancy. He loved a worthy adversary, and the man seemed to him to have played a giant game. His heart warmed towards him.

He sat in resolute patience for hours, scarcely moving, and insensible to weariness or ennui. Patience met his reward at last, and his neighbor went away, locking his door behind him. He looked from his own chamber door, and caught sight of the stalwart retiring figure. He had remarked this noticeable neighbor of his before, and something in the square set of the shoulders and the poise of the head struck him anew.

"He will be a fiend when I come to deal with him," said M. Vergueil to himself.

He followed him calmly down the stairs to make sure of his disappearance from the hotel, and lingering on the hotel steps with a pretence of consulting some memoranda which he drew from his pocket he heard the eminent traveller call a cab.

"Where to, sir?"

"The Fancy Fair, Albert Hall."

"We are beginning to lose our native modesty," said M. Vergueil, smiling to himself, "and to go a little into society."

With that he turned with an elaborate air of having forgotten something, and marched briskly up the stairs. As he went he drew from his pocket a bunch of keys, calmly selected one, and went on dangling it between his thumb and finger. He walked straight to Ronald Morton's room, and with the insolence and aplomb begotten of long service unlocked the door, passed through, and secured it by the bolt on the other side. He took a survey of the place. A portmanteau stood in one corner of the room, and dropping on his knees beside it he selected from his bunch of passkeys one that looked likely for the purpose, and tried it in the lock.

"That will be a work of time," he said. "The lock is a patent. Very well, I will try elsewhere first."

The lock of the wardrobe offered no difficulty, and there before him on the middle shelf lay a great pile of Austrian bonds. He smiled placidly, and drew from his pocket a memorandum book, on one page of which was pasted a slip of newspaper. He consulted the cutting and the number of the topmost bond. Then he smiled anew, more placidly even than before, and extracting a single sheet from the middle of the pile he folded it deliberately and put it into his breast pocket.

Next he relocked the wardrobe, walked to the door and listened there for a moment, and slipping out to the corridor, was in his own room in a twinkling. He stayed there but a very little while, drawing on his gloves with a thoughtful look.

"That will do," he said. "I can enlighten Mr. Frost at once. He can be trusted to hold his tongue until the proper moment, and he has waited long and patiently enough to deserve a little hope."

He walked down stairs, ordered a cab, and being driven to Park Lane alighted at the entrance of a mansion there, and tendering his card, asked for Mr. Frost. Mr. Frost was not at home, but M. Vergueil extracted from the footman the intelligence that his master had gone to the fancy fair, that that day opened at the Albert Hall. Thither M. Vergueil pursued him, and after a prolonged wandering about the hall found the object of his search. The detective was not a man who permitted himself easily to be surprised, but for the moment he was knocked all abroad by an unexpected coincidence. Mr. Frost was engaged in animated converse with no less a person than Ronald Morton. After the first shock of surprise this lent a certain piquancy to the situation to his mind.

The two men stood near a stall over which appeared the names of Lady Macquodale, Lady Mabel Ventnor, and Miss Grey, and one stately old lady and two pretty young ones were listening together with Mr. Frost whilst the eminent traveller talked. M. Vergueil approached the group

The Manchester Courier says: The betrothal of Prince George, only son of the Prince of Wales, and Princess Mary Victoria, daughter of the Duke and Duchess of Teck, has been definitely decided upon and will shortly be announced. No surprise is occasioned by the statement. It is said that the Queen, who is very fond of Princess Mary, is heartily in favor of the betrothal, and that, in fact, it was her interest that brought it about. The marriage of the Prince and Princess would be greeted with much satisfaction by the people with whom both are extremely popular.

—The following item from an English scientific journal is of interest as showing the awful destructive power attained by the marvellous progress in gun building during the last half of the nineteenth century: The heaviest modern ordnance is the English 100 ton gun. Its charge is 700 pounds of the best prismatic gunpowder, and the steel shot weighs 1800 pounds. At last test this enormous shot penetrated entirely through compressed armor (steel faced iron) 20 inches thick; then through iron backing 5 inches thick; then it pierced wholly through 20 feet of oak, five feet of granite, and 11 feet of hard concrete, finally tearing three feet into a brick wall. No existing fortress, much less armored vessel could withstand such a shot."

MANY DEPUTATIONS AT OTTAWA YESTERDAY.

Cutting Down Expenses on the Intercolonial.—A Brantford Deputation Wants a New Drill Shed and a Subsidy for the Brantford, Waterford, and Lake Erie Railway.

OTTAWA, May 10.—Yesterday was Intercolonial Railway day in the House, and from 4 o'clock until midnight the annual discussion was continued. Mr. Haggart, Minister of Railways, led off the debate with a statement of the affairs of the road and announced that he intended to introduce a new policy, and in future endeavor to have the annual deficit, which will amount to nearly $700,000 this year, very greatly reduced, or disappear altogether. He said that he intended to reduce the number of employees on the Intercolonial, who now number 4181, by 210, which would effect a saving of $95,000, and by taking off several trains and rearranging the service without impairing its efficiency, to reduce the train mileage 787,000 miles, which would effect a saving of $418,000, or a total of $513,000.

On the Prince Edward Island Railway, where there were 292 employees, he expected to discharge 20, by which there would be a saving of $9200, and another $9300 would be saved by taking off one train which was not needed.

He spoke at some length on the terminal facilities at Halifax, for which a vote of $152,000 was asked, and said that it was not intended that the money should be expended until he had thoroughly looked into the matter.

A Prohibition Motion.

Mr. Charlton gives notice that he will move the following resolution:

That the state of public opinion upon the question of the prohibition of the manufacture, importation and sale of intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes should be ascertained by a reference of the question to the electors of Canada at the polls.

understand thoroughly the anatomy of the throat and bronchial tubes, and know exactly what to do when emergencies arise. They dread colds—that is, sore throat, huskiness of the voice, coughing, inflammation of the bronchial tubes, and enlargement of the tonsils. Any one of these ailments may occasion considerable pecuniary loss and public disappointment.

Our most noted singers and orators are always provided with the best means for the instant removal of such troubles. They have made the Harvard Bronchial Syrup their friend and protector, and always place the utmost confidence in its prompt action.

No discovery in medicine has given the satisfaction that Harvard Bronchial Syrup invariably gives. There is no such thing as failure with it; it stops the troublesome cough, heals the irritated throat, clears the voice, and gives an elasticity and strength that is truly wonderful. It is pleasant to the taste, and put up in such convenient form that it can be carried in the pocket.

Harvard Bronchial Syrup is to day without a rival, and has received more testimonials from distinguished people, than any other remedy ever given to the public.

OTTAWA, May 11.—At a meeting of the Railway Committee of the House of Commons an act to revise and amend the act to incorporate the Brockville and New York Bridge Company was passed.

A bill to incorporate the Niagara Falls and Queenston Railway and Bridge Company was thrown out by a majority of one. Sir John Thompson stated that the land belonging to the Crown at the Falls was all given to the Provincial Government for the use of the public as a park. If the bill became law they would not be able to expropriate enough land for a robin to build its nest on. Mr. Irving, Q.C., on behalf of the Park Commissioners, said that the Local Government had already granted a charter for an electric railway from Queenston to Chippewa, which would supply all the wants of the place.

Drill Halls and Railways.

OTTAWA, May 11.—A delegation from Brantford arrived in the city yesterday. It comprised G. H. Wilkes, president; Thomas Elliott, vice-president; J. J. Hawkins, treasurer of the Brantford, Waterloo and Lake Erie Railway, and Mayor Secord of Brantford. They waited on Hon. John Haggart, Minister of Railways, and Premier Abbott at noon, requesting a subsidy for the continuation of the railway from Waterloo to Port Dover via Simcoe.

A Redistribution Deputation.

OTTAWA, May 11.—A deputation from Clarence Township, the Liberal stronghold in Russell County, urged the Government to abandon its proposal to transfer the township to Prescott County for electoral purposes. Sir John Thompson agreed to lay the matter before his colleagues.

OTTAWA, May 10.—There was a big time yesterday before the Senate Railway Committee over an act respecting the Bell Telephone Company. Besides the short preamble, this bill only contained a small clause of five lines which asked powers to increase the capital stock of the company to an amount not exceeding $5,000,000. The attack against the bill was made by Senators Boulton, Power and Kaubach, who held that the company had now too extensive powers and was to all intents and purposes a monopoly. Senators Ogilvie, Scott, McMillan, Smith and Miller defended the telephone company. The result was that the bill was subjected to some important amendments; for instance the company desired bonding powers equal to the amount of the authorized stock. This has been denied them and they are confined to the $500,000 which they now possess. The capital stock of the company may be increased to $5,000,000 that is including the $500,000 already mentioned. A very important clause was inserted in the bill which provides that telephone rates must be subjected to the Governor-General in Council. Before increasing the rates the company will have to apply to the executive. In the meantime, they can arrange what they please. The change will prevent monopoly rates. The bill was reported.

KILLED IN A COAL MINE.

AN AWFUL DISASTER REPORTED NEAR SEATTLE.

An Explosion of Gas in the Northern Pacific Company's Mines at Roslyn Causes Terrible Loss of Life—The Bodies of the Slain Terribly Mutilated

SEATTLE, Wash., April 11.—A special to The Post-Intelligencer says: Yesterday afternoon a terrible gas explosion occurred in the slope of mine No. 2 of the Northern Pacific Coal Company at Roslyn, in which the loss of life has exceeded in number that of any other disaster that has ever been chronicled in the Northwest.

The exact nature of the explosion or the circumstances that led to it will probably never be known since it is believed that every miner who was at work in the slope at the time has perished.

It is not definitely known how many men were in the vicinity of the disaster, but it is believed that between 45 and 50 were on the three levels that were affected by the gas explosion.

Large relief forces are at work and at this time six bodies have been recovered. These men were working nearest to the opening and at some distance from the point where it is supposed the explosion occurred. Most of the men were 1500 and 2000 feet farther in the slope and in the immediate vicinity of the accident. There is no doubt either in the minds of miners or the company officials that every man was instantly killed.

The Roslyn mine is one of the largest in the state, supplying the western division of the N. P. and U. P. roads with coal, and has a capacity of 20,000 tons a day.

The explosion occurred just as two gangs were shifting at 1.30 o'clock.

The explosion has closed up the shaft. The mine is on fire and it is impossible to recover the bodies. The company will forward 40 coffins from Seattle by midnight train.

He Belonged to Near Toronto and Was of a Moody Disposition.

VANCOUVER, B.C., May 11.—A man, who registered under the name of W. Baylis, arrived at the Oriental Hotel yesterday. An hour later his dead body was found in his bedroom.

Beside him was a revolver, and there was a bullet wound in his head. Ashes in the stove showed that he had deliberately destroyed all letters or papers which would lead to his friends being informed of his death.

Robert T. Graham subsequently recognized the corpse as that of William Baylis, whom he had worked with in a lumber camp, near Donald, in December, 1890. Baylis was then in a despondent disposition, and while the others were engaged at sports in the evening he would sit by himself apparently brooding over his misfortunes. He seldom spoke of himself and all Mr. Graham knew about him was that he had come from near Toronto.

WANT GAIETY WITH PIETY.

Methodists May Change Discipline to Admit Dancing.

OMAHA, Neb., May 11.—The old-school Methodist will no doubt be horrified when he learns that a scheme is on foot to allow the religious to mix a little gaiety with their piety. Among the many memorials presented to the Methodist Conference is one from the Troy conference, which petitions the general conference to expunge from the discipline section 242 relating to amusements, or at least that it be modified so that dancing may be permissible. Bishop Foster of Boston approves the movement and has given it his official sanction and will no doubt advocate its adoption. The memorial is now in the hands of the committee on discipline, to whom it was referred.

Casualties.

Nelson Shannon, an employee in the cement works, Napanee Mills, met with a serious accident last Saturday while trying to throw off a belt from the pulley with a stick. Part of his clothing caught in the swiftly-running belt, which soon hurled him into the machinery. His skull was badly smashed and bruised, an arm broken and other serious injuries done. He is slowly recovering. A purse of over $40 was made up by his employers and fellow-workmen.

Mr. John Neilly, of Newburgh, also met with a severe accident one day last week, falling off a ladder and breaking his leg.

On Tuesday last week, a little son of Mrs. Buchanan, Napanee, four years old, fell off a chair while trying to reach into a cupboard and broke its arm and dislocated its shoulder.

One day last week, Reeve, the four-year-old son of Hugh Rankin, Napanee, fell off a platform in the rear of the hotel a distance of about 15 feet, and was picked up insensible.

Death of Mrs. Fred. Greer.

An Elaborate Display.

This week Mr. Hulett, Napanee's crack photographer, had a most elaborate display of artistic photographs in the windows of the store lately occupied by Messrs Perry & Co. One of the number, a group consisting of the Misses M. Tilley, V. Hall, L.
Hall, L. Allen, Belle Pollard, Allie Johnston and R. Harmer, who were all dressed in Japanese costume, attracted a great deal of attention and almost every minute in the day a crowd of admirers could be seen on the sidewalk gazing at the lovely picture which on account of the fine pose and clear expression of features we think is the best picture of its kind we ever have seen.
Another one of little Allie Johnston, Rev C. O. Johnston's little daughter, also dressed in Japanese costume was perfect.

Dead to Death.

David Alhant, an employee on the farm of Mr. Mandel McAllister, father of Mr. Joseph McAllister, on Tuesday, May 10, about five miles from here on the Belleville road, near the Deseronto Junction, bled to death from a wound in the arm on Saturday last. The day previous he had gone to the barn to put in the horses, and seeing a snake about a foot in length of time Mrs. McAllister went out to see what was keeping him. She found the doors fastened, but calling the assistance of some neighbors close by they went inside and found the man lying on the floor in a pool of blood.
Dr. Ward, of Napanee, was immediately telegraphed for and took the first train. He found the man in a most exhausted state and too faint to speak. A large artery just above the elbow was cut and he was unable to tell how it happened. Dr. Ward bound up the patient's wounds and stayed with him until twelve o'clock, coming home on the midnight train. The Dr. says that when he left the man he was in a fair way for recovery. Next morning a telegram announced his death.

Wright vs Collier.

Judgment on appeal by the defendants from the judgment of the Chancery Divisional Court which affirmed the judgment for the plaintiff pronounced by Rose, J., at the trial at Picton, 1891. The action was brought to recover $2,000 for damages resulting to the plaintiff from a collision on the bay of Quinte between the plaintiffs' schooner Two Brothers and the defendants' steamer Reinder, the accident having been caused (as the plaintiff alleged and as the trial judge found) by the negligence of the master of the steambot. In arriving at this conclusion Rose, J., availed himself of the consent of the parties to consult two mariners of experience, and in his judgment he expressly adopted the conclusion of these experts as to the defendants' negligence. The appellants contended that the course was irregular under the practice; that their consent did not extend to such a proceeding; and that they were entitled to the independent judgment of the judge himself, especially as the experts did not hear all the evidence nor view the looms in quo. They also urged that the evidence failed to show negligence on their part; that there was at least contributory negligence on the part of the respondents, and that the Divisional Court was at all events in error in refusing a new trial. The court held that the course adopted by Rose, J., was irregular and that the judgment should be set aside. Appeal allowed with costs.
No costs of abortive trial. O. J. Holman and John English (Napanee) for the appellants. Alcorn, Q. C., for the respondent.

friends. About three months ago she was taken ill with confinement, giving birth to a bright little baby boy, and since that time had scarcely left her bed, a tumor growing in her stomach which finally broke and caused blood poisoning from which she died on Saturday last, May 7th. During her prolonged illness her mother was almost constantly by her side and when she learned that she was to die she appeared quite resigned to her fate, choosing all her own bearers, asking that the Rev. C.
O. Johnston preach her funeral service and that the choir, of which she was once a member, sing the hymn "I need thee every hour" and wishing to be remembered to the Sunday School, of which she was once a teacher. She also wished that each of the bearers who she named—Messrs.
Thos. and Almond Scrimshaw, and John Stewart, of Deseronto, and Arthur and Wilson Wales, and Perry Huffman, of Napanee, each wear a bouquet of flowers at her funeral which took place on Monday, from her father's residence, Water street,
the body having been brought from Watertown for interment. She was laid to rest in the Napanee cemetery vault, the remains to be removed on the 23d inst., and buried in the Bethany cemetery.
